Adam Baxter

Dentist

Dentistry is a fantastic profession I am proud to be part of. I have the pleasure of meeting a wide variety of patients, who each bring a different interesting element to my day.

You, as the patient, are the most important part of dentistry. Without patients there simply wouldn't be any dentistry, so I take time to truly listen to and understand your individual needs.

I am passionate about providing high quality dentistry suited to the individual needs of my patients. I enjoy both restoring mouths and teeth to full function at the same time as restoring people's confidence in their smile.

Having worked in a variety of roles including emergency dentistry, I focus all my treatment on being delivered in a way which is as comfortable as possible. Let's be honest — a trip to the dentist is never going to be the most enjoyable experience of your life, but if we can make it as pleasant and relaxing as possible it always helps.

Dentistry is a constantly developing world and I believe it is important to not only develop alongside it but contribute to that development.
